Communication report - Projet intégrateur
Group 6A

ABDOLMOHAMMADIAN Kian, ADAMAH Amele Olivia,
ANDRIANAMBININTSOA Rarivoson, BERTHELOT Sacha,
BOUBACHICHE Abderaouf, FAYEZ HANNAALLAH Karim Shady Monir,
HARZHANAU Anton, JIANG Tingting

May 13, 2025

Introduction

"Vacashon" is an online board game made for the whole family being heavily inspired by the famous board game "Monopoly©". Wanting to make a different aesthetic for our game and add new game mechanics, we wanted to find a theme that represented our whole development team. After some time we found out that the main characteristic of our group was that every member was from a different country, and a game about traveling around the world to buy properties in several cities all around the globe was the perfect idea to find our own visual identity and find a unique name for our game.

Thinking about the idea of traveling the world like tourists and still doing a businessman's job by buying cities and buildings brought up the idea of a pun mixing "Vacation" and "Cash" to create the name of our game "Vacashon".

1 Visual identity and marketing techniques

1.1 Artistic direction and target

Figure 1: Logo of the game "Vacashon"

Not wanting to follow the same graphic style as "Monopoly©" which even if being cartoony with the main mascot Mr. Monopoly is serious and really focused on business, we wanted our main character to have more expressions and make the game more colorful and lively.

To follow a specific color chart, we chose five main colors for the screens, the pop-up windows, the buttons and most of the interactive elements the users will be able to encounter through the whole game and its menus.

Figure 2: Color charts of the game

Knowing the main theme of the game is traveling around the world, we thought these colors could remember the users the main shades of the beach and vacation ambiance. The brown colors reminds of the palm trees, the coconuts, the sandals and the leather suitcase texture. The blue colors remind of the clear water of the sea or the ocean as well as the sky. And the white color reflects the color of the rare clouds in the sky when completely there are completely open skies.

These colors will be used in the whole game as well as the announcements posts and the texts used in our different medias on Internet. With the bright but not flashy colors, the vacation theme still thinking about business and money spending with strategy and the graphic style of our game, we wanted to target an audience going from 8 to 50 years old approximately.
The funny cartoony theme of the main character as well as the font used and the colors are appealing for children and the vacation and business notions are known for teenagers, adults and parents to play and allow them to play with older or younger people.

Although for the communication on social medias, we wanted to focus a much more restricted audience: teenagers and young adults. Our communication method is to use popular pictures or trends online and model our main character to follow these famous pictures to fit the context of our game to be able to talk easily with this audience who is often scrolling on social medias, finding funny pictures and trends.

1.2 Social networks used

To follow our ambition to target the teenagers and young adults, we chose the two platforms Instagram and TikTok which are the most adapted and which the largest part of the users are part of the audience we're trying to communicate to. The great aspect about these social medias is the ability to highlight pictures without necessarily adding long texts to explain the content posted.

Our main objective with our posts is to focus the look on the graphic aspect and the trend followed with the pictures and captions directly integrated in the pictures only to be able to put hashtags in the real description of our posts to focus different topics on the platforms trying to reach larger audience than friends and close people.

Figure 3: Social medias pages of our game.

2 Posts description

To introduce our project, we wanted to make a full announcement post with paragraphs presenting the team and the goal of the development of the game and the finale result. To do that we used the same graphic aspect as our game with a light blue sky, palm trees and luggage at the bottom to keep our guideline through our posts.
Note: The images posted on our social medias can be found in the Appendix.

After the quick presentation of the game, we wanted to post "Memes" to adapt to the usual content recommended to the audience target we want to post for. It is why we wanted to adapt one of the most famous that can be easily adapted to our game context, the meme "Disaster Girl" which show a little girl smirking at the camera while a house is burning in the background. The adaptation for our accounts has the caption "My house after a game of Vacashon with my friends", to funnily illustrate that the main character on the picture set his house on fire after loosing against his friends.

Shortly before the release of the game, we thought it could be great to create a teasing for the people who actively follow our accounts by revealing the look of the game board. To create a context for the reveal and make the users interact with our post, we posted a picture of a luggage where is written "Swipe to open the luggage" so they have to swipe to the left to discover the board inside.

For the release of the game, we made a banner showing the main character walking on a crosswalk with his luggage exploring the city where he landed. The banner shows the name of the game as well as the platforms it is playable on and shows the link to download the game as well as the username of our social medias. Initially we wanted to make a launch trailer but not having enough time unfortunately it was canceled .

Figure 4: Banner to reveal the release date.

To show the game to the other students at the university, we also decided to print fliers and display them in the appropriate spots. (written in french for better understanding). The design follows the one of the banner at the end of the release trailer and tells briefly the content of the game also including our social medias accounts as well as a QR code to access our downloading website easily and play online with on mobile if the readers want to.

During the whole communication we used the #vacashongame for people to be able to identify us if they play our game online after the release and post their experience or feedback on social medias. It is also the signature of each of our content, meaning every post we made are created by us and only for us like a copyright.

Even though our accounts didn't get as much success as we expected, we had a lot of support from the people who follow our accounts and that gave us motivation to keep working actively on the game and especially its graphic aspect. We wanted the posts on social medias to follow the same style as the whole game with an expressive and lively main character, bright colors and vacation vibes in the captions, music or images used.

Appendix

- Vacashon Instagram account: @vacashon_game
- Vacashon TikTok account: @vacashon_game

Figure 5: First announcement post

Figure 6: "Disaster Girl" meme adaptation

Figure 7: Sneak Peek of the game board

Figure 8: Printed flier for university students